KNOW YOUR FOOD

The culture of 'eating with our eyes' is exploited by commercial farms to create perfect-looking produce using chemicals which are harmful and even cancerous.

These farms work like production powerhouses, relying on monoculture, chemical inputs and heavy machinery. A huge volume of food is wasted, in turn wasting water, energy and labour with high methane emissions from rotting food waste.

Nature makes everything in different sizes, shapes, and colours - worms and insects on fresh produce show that it is grown naturally, without harmful chemicals.

Farms that work in harmony with nature grow seasonal grains, vegetables and fruits. They do not try to engineer their fields and allow for natural biodiversity to thrive, resulting in wholesome, nutrient-packed produce.
